Mad World

The 37-year-old Upper Austrian composer and pianist, Daniela Schaupp, is releasing her second album "Mad World" with her band "Pianocrash".

"Mad World" is an album that comes in a classic orchestral guise - but with every swerve, there are cheeky flashes of rock'n'roll. It's the unusual combination of piano, drums, violin and bass that creates a powerful drama which is impossible to resist. This time the electric guitar and stringed instruments are also used, giving the pieces a new energetic intensity. The result is a wide cinemascope sound that is capable of setting off a flood of images in every listener. For example, the baroque-sounding "Para Siempre" could be the film music for a never-ending festival at the court of the Sun King. In "Mad World" Stephen King's Walkin' Dude strides through the world in seven-league boots and is hilariously amused by the dance of death being performed everywhere. "Song for my children" can transport you to a flowery meadow where little ones frolic and dance until they fall onto the grass, dizzy, and stare wide-eyed at the sky spinning above them. "Mad World" is an album born of a love of freedom and a fighting spirit, but which always turns in a surprising way towards a place where you want to put down roots.
